

Electricity and heating are set to become more expensive!
What can you do now?

Is your energy provider insolvent?

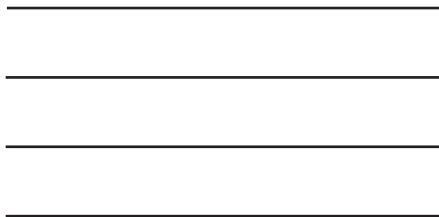

No need to panic! Even if the supply of energy is stopped, you will not be without energy!

In this case, the local primary provider will provide you with a replacement supply. You should not continue to pay to an insolvent energy supplier. From now on, you pay to the bank account provided by the insolvency administrator. Cancel the direct debit authorisation or the standing order with your bank. Overall, there are some things to consider if your energy provider goes bankrupt.

Therefore, it is best to get help from:
Your local consumer centre or at www.schlichtungsstelle-energie.de
